SOCIALISM

A plan based upon the assumption that man is a different being from what he is. If he were so perfect that his love of human kind would banish from everyone in human form selfishness, and retain in him the energy, self-sacrifice, and industry in behalf of others that he now manifests in behalf of himself and those near to him, then there would be no need for the organization of a socialist community because we would have it at hand. Until we are perfect beings of this kind socialism must either constitute a tyranny so rigid as to destroy not only the right of liberty and to interfere with the pursuit of happiness or it must be a failure.—William Howard Taft.
